Gardening Tips

- It's the best time to plant or transplant trees, shrubs, and fruit crops. Make sure you water all plants well and add at least 3-4 inch layer of mulch for new plants.
- If you choose to plant evergreens, check them regularly throughout the winter in order to ensure they get enough water.
- Mulch trees and shrubs to help reduce weeds, conserve moisture, and provide insulation from frost and freezing temperatures.
- Cut perennials’ stems back close to the ground when they begin to die back. Leave any ornamental grasses to provide winter interest until spring.
- Winter annuals such as ornamental cabbage, kale, and pansies can still be planted. The earlier in the month, the better.
- Keep heavy layers of leaves raked from the lawn. You can compost them or mow over light layers of leaves in order to create a mulch that adds important nutrients to your lawn.
- You can incorporate the compost made from leaves in your annual and vegetable gardens for next growing season.
- Clean up all fallen leaves and debris to help eliminate overwintering insect and disease organisms.
- Cut the tops off asparagus plants and mulch with a good layer of compost. Cover strawberries 2 inches deep with hay or straw in order to reduce weeds and increase winter protection. Secure raspberry and blackberry canes to protect them from wind whipping.
- Give houseplants as much light as possible as lower light days begin. Stop fertilizing these plants until spring. Provide them with increased humidity as levels decrease due to indoor heating.
- Begin to increase the time between waterings, but do not cut back on the amount of water.
